

Distributors often left the company because they didn't like the aspect of selling to friends and family and didn't make what they expected to

According to AARP, people employed by MLMs typically left their role for various reasons, besides finding other employment

